MATTERS BEFORE THE SURROGATE

The will and codicil of George W. Martin of this city have been filed with Surrogate Gill in the surrogate's court and the testimony of one witness taken. To his daughter, Margie J. Sahler, wife of John D. Sahler, the testator gives one-third of his residuary estate after payment of debts and funeral expenses; to his daughter, Elizabeth B. Smith, wife of Elmer B. Smith, he gives one-third, the remaining one-third is given to the executrices in trust for the benefit of his son, George E. Martin, at whose death such share is given to his children, or in the event of there being no children, such share is to be divided between his sisters. Any beneficiary contesting the will is not to receive any part of the estate but such share shall be divided among those not contesting. The two daughters are appointed executrices and trustees. J., such sums to be paid to them when they become twenty-one years of age. The value of the personal estate is over $15,000 and the value of the real estate is over $10,000.

The KITCHEN CABINET

A very sublime and grand thing is truth, in its way though, like other sublime and grand things, such as thunderstorms, and that we're not always over and above glad to see it—Dickens.

PALATABLE FOODS.

A nice, rich, steamed brown bread with raisins may be served with a rich pudding sauce, making an excellent dessert, and no one need be the wiser as to its being a makeshift in an emergency.

If no raisins are steamed in the bread a few may be steamed and sprinkled over each slice with a few chopped nuts.

Savory Beans.—A pint of kidney beans boiled until tender with a piece of salt pork or bacon, when done, will have a rich sauce. Add more water if necessary; add a fried onion and some chopped parsley to the beans. Season to taste and when serving add a tablespoonful of oil and vinegar to further season them.

Roquefort Cheese Dressing.—Mix together half a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper, six tablespoonfuls of olive oil, and when well mixed add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar or lemon juice. Beat all together until an emulsion is formed. Add to this an eighth of a pound of Roquefort cheese, crushed fine, and a little chopped pimento or tobacco sauce.

Boiled Fresh Tongue—Sardellian Sauce.—Cook a fresh tongue in simmering water for three hours until it is tender. Skim it out and cut in quarter-inch slices, arrange on a platter and pour over it the following sauce: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add two tablespoonfuls of flour; mix and cook, then add gradually two cupfuls of the liquor in which the tongue was boiled, six anchovies, cut fine, let boil a minute, season with salt and pepper and pour over the tongue.

Blitzkuchen.—Cream a cupful of butter, add a cupful of powdered sugar, add the grated rind of half a lemon, sift two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of salt and two cupfuls of flour together; add three-quarters of a cupful of milk, alternating with the flour, and the rolls of four eggs; beat well, fold in the whites and bake in a shallow pan; brush the top with egg, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and finely chopped almonds. Bake 20 minutes.

OUR WATER SHEDS IN GREAT PERIL

Destruction of the Forests Now Going On.

Proposition No. 1 Will Stop It—Vast Interests Impaired by Rapid Cutting of Privately Owned Forests—State's Property Menaced—Vitality Important That the Vote on Proposition No. 1 Should Be "Yes."

On election day we are going to decide whether or not the great Adirondack and Catskill water sheds shall be protected and preserved. On that day Proposition No. 1, providing for a $10,000,000 state bond issue, will be voted on. Of this amount $7,500,000 will be used for the purchase of lands now being denuded or threatened with denudation in the Adirondack and Catskill forest preserves, and $2,500,000 will be expended for the extension of the Palisades Interstate Park.

Our Prosperity Depends on Our Forests.

Our forests are not only the source of our timber supply and the resort of the camper with his rod and gun. To more than eight million people who today dwell upon our farms and in our towns and cities these forests have a more vital value, for upon their preservation depends in a large measure the continued prosperity of our agriculture, our industries and our commerce.

The water supply for our canals depends upon our watersheds, and it was our canal system that developed the chain of flourishing cities, with their vast industrial activities, which extend across the state.

Forest Destruction Means Floods.

By the destruction of our forests all of these vast interests are put in peril. Ruthless and unwise lumbering has already diminished the normal flow of our navigable streams, has made the runoff more rapid and caused floods. The mountain soil has been exposed to the sun and the winds and deprived of its moisture, and the ground waters have been lowered to such an extent that the interests of the farmer have suffered.

Rapid and Complete Destruction of Privately Owned Forests Is In Progress.

Proposition No. 1 Will Save Them. Much of the privately owned land in the Adirondacks and Catskills must be purchased at once if it is to be acquired by the State before complete denudation has arrived. The first lumbering operations were not soil wood only, which was taken out by driving on the rivers. The hardwood was left largely untouched, and thus, where fire has not swept through, a forest cover has been left on the land. But in the last few years the privately owned land within the lines of the State Parks in the Adirondacks and Catskills has entered upon the last stage of destruction. This is the cleaning out of the hardwood by large lumber corporations, who are operating logging railroads through their tracts and are making a clean cut of every forest tree which can in any way be utilized. These operations are measured not in acres, but in entire townships.

The State's Property Is Menaced by Surrounding Slash.

Proposition No. 1 Will Protect It. The State's own holdings, totalling in value fully $40,000,000 are menaced at innumerable points by the fire traps created upon the privately owned land that is interspersed with the State property. Some idea of the extent to which State and privately owned land is intermixed, and of the danger from fire which this entails upon the State land, may be gathered from the fact that the State's property lines, because of the many small parcels, aggregate more than 9,000 miles. In the language of the trenches, these salients of privately owned land must be eliminated and the State lines must be consolidated as a measure of protection for the property that the State now owns.

The Bond Issue Will Be Wisely Used.

Proposition No. 1 Guarantees This. That the funds arising from the passage of Proposition No. 1 will be wisely expended is guaranteed by Chapter 509 of the Laws of 1916, under which this proposal is now submitted to the people. The acquisition of lands under the act will extend over a number of years, and it is provided that no proceeds of the bond issue may be used for this purpose until they are first appropriated thereto by the Legislature. For the extension of the Forest Preserve $7,500,000 can be used, but only "under the direction of the Conservation Commission, by and with the advice and consent of the Commissioners of the Land Office."

Proposition No. 1 Should Pass.

The votes that have been recorded on all questions concerning the forests have shown that the people of the State have the welfare of the forests at heart and may be depended upon at all times to vote in accordance with the best interests of the forests whenever they understand true facts. For the welfare of our agriculture, our industry and our commerce the vote on Proposition No. 1 should be "yes." It is of vital interest to every man, woman and child in the state that this proposition be approved.

Renovating Serges.

To take spots off serges and similar fabrics put a teaspoonful of quillain bark into a pint of boiling water and let it stand till next day. Pour off, strain and bottle. A little of this applied with a clean rag to tweeds and serges acts like magic.

KINGSTON, N. Y., OCT. 31, 1916.

WE KNOW THESE MEN.

Ulster county is fortunate in having a more personal acquaintance with the Republican candidates on the state ticket than most localities and it takes far more than a political interest in their welfare and re-election. Governor Whitman has visited Ulster on different occasions, sometimes in his official capacity, sometimes as a candidate seeking the support of the voters in order that the constructive legislation begun by him may be carried to completion, and sometimes in his capacity as a private individual. He knows the voters of Ulster and they know him and the sturdy principles of good government which as Chief Executive of the Empire State he has enforced as the governor of all the people.

Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoenbeck likewise has visited Ulster county on many occasions and is well known personally to many voters. His record is clean and upright, and his extraordinary understanding of men and things acquired through a life filled with hard struggles, beginning as a newsboy seeking to earn his living, make him particularly well qualified to deal with the various matters which are presented to him as an official.

Secretary of State Francis J. Hugo's various visits to Ulster county and his willingness to learn what the people want, besides telling the people what he has discovered in regard to the great problems which come to his office, has added much to the confidence which has been reposed in him.

Comptroller Eugene M. Travis also has visited Ulster on many occasions, long before he became a State official and since, and the well merited confidence which has been reposed in him never has been abused. Next to Governor Whitman, Comptroller Travis probably has a more intimate acquaintance in Ulster county than any other State official in many years.

State Treasurer James L. Wells is less known personally than his associates on the State ticket but his record in handling State funds with profit to the State instead of to the institutions in which they are deposited commends him to every intelligent voter.

Ulster county's first personal acquaintance with Attorney General Egbert B. Woodbury was at the time he was appointed commissioner to take testimony in the Sammons matter, and after that he visited the county frequently as a member of the State Tax Commission. The same ability and dispatch with which he handled these matters have marked his career as Attorney General.

State Engineer Frank M. Williams, now a neighbor in Orange county, has spent so much of his time in Ulster, both on official business and as an individual long before he became connected with the State government, that he might almost be regarded as one of our own sons.

Frank H. Hiseock, candidate for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, and Cuthbert W. Pound, candidate for Associate Judge of that court, are better known to the lawyers of the county than to the laymen, but among both professional men and laymen their record of integrity in the performance of judicial duties is well known and most strongly.

The other candidates, too, have many personal acquaintances who are proud of the records the candidates have made. Hughes for president; Calder for United States Senator; Judge Howard and Charles L. Nichols, who is also a candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court; Congressman Ward—all are men who have "made good."

It is more natural that we should know our county candidates—Joel Rink and Julian L. Fever for Assemblymen; Philip Schantz for county treasurer; Frederick G. Traver for District Attorney and Ernest A. Kelly for Coroner.

Looking over the entire list, no voter doubts the pre-eminent qualifications of each candidate named. Each personally is above reproach, each stands for good government in his particular line; good government—the best government—is what we are seeking. Then why not vote for the men who will give it to us, especially since we know them and know what they stand for?

According to our Democratic friends every man who votes for President Wilson "knows what he is voting for." That statement is about as truthful as most of the matter with which the campaign is being enriched through Democratic channels. It is a puzzle to even the most loyal Democrat whether he will be voting for a free-trader or a near-protectionist favoring a fake tariff commission. As a matter of fact, the man who votes for President Wilson cannot know whether he is voting for a pacifist "too proud to fight," or a militarist who asserts we must have "incomparably the greatest navy in the world;" for a man who interfered to overthrow a Mexican President, or a man who says that the Mexicans shall be permitted to work out their own salvation in their own way; for a man who stood for Secretary Garrison's plan of a continental volunteer army, or for a man who afterward repudiated that plan and came out for federalization of the National Guard; for a man who told Germany she would be held to "strict accountability," with or without a postscript, or for a man who has never succeeded in obtaining any satisfaction for the American lives snuffed out with the Lusitania; for a man who says he is the friend of organized labor, or for a man who declared that he was "a fierce partisan of the open shop." If being all things to all men, with attitudes so constantly changing as to baffle even the science of motion photography, is the mark of a good politician, the art of buncoing a people has a great master in Woodrow Wilson. But at no stage in their history have the American people ever preferred a wobbly politician to a statesman of firmness and decision in the President's chair.

When the processes of a single track mind are bewildering to even the more astute of Americans, what must be their effect upon the mentalities of an illiterate people such as the Mexicans? Even the Mexican leaders who have relied upon the professions of President Wilson are beyond their depth in attempting to follow the exquisite varieties of the servant of humanity who abandons his own countrymen whenever expediency requires. A striking series of interviews are published in the current issue of the Outlook in which Carranza and his advisers express their opinions of Wilson's inconsistencies in no uncertain terms. The First Chief is brutal Brutus in sending home the javelin at one point where he says: "Wilson has not kept faith with Mexico." Mexico has nothing on the United States in that respect. Carranza goes on to state that "we would prefer a firm, frank, consistent policy from the United States to such a policy as Wilson's." General Obregon puts the direct finger of a soldier on the question when he says "the greatest failing of President Wilson is that his acts so seldom coincide with his words." In like vein do the others, Secretary of State Aguilar and General Gonzales, express themselves, their views exhibiting a scarce disguised contempt for the administration at Washington that can only add to American resentment. The absolute futility of a policy that brings down the merited condemnation of all sides needs no special emphasis to make it plain. It is not a question of Mr. Wilson's policy so much as a question of Mr. Wilson's character. This independence from the influence of which there can be no achievement worth while, has been painfully absent from every phase of our dealings with Mexico and the Mexicans.

"You are sure this prosperity you mention is genuine?" "Absolutely," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "I know of a dozen men that'll go broke next week because I managed to squeeze them in the market."—Washington Star.

His Choice.
"Where is your lawyer?" inquired the judge.

"I have none," responded the prisoner; "haven't any money."

"Do you want a lawyer?" asked the judge.

"Yes, your Honor."

"There is Mr. Smith, Mr. Brown and Mr. Green," said the judge, pointing to the young attorneys sitting, listless and breathless, for something to turn up, "and Mr. Alexander is out in the corridor."

The prisoner eyed the budding attorneys and after a critical survey, said: "Well, I guess I'll take Mr. Alexander."—Brooklyn Citizen.

Armed Bulrushes.

The conditions in the trenches were dreary in the extreme after the drenching and long continued rainfall, but the irrepressible spirit of the "Pals" were not yet entirely quenched when the order came to leave the trenches.

"Hurry up out of this, my gallant soldiers!" was the cheery call of the sergeant to his waist deep and rain sodden men.

"Soldiers!" came the derisive answer from one of them. "I'm not a soldier; I'm a blooming bulrush!"—Exchange.

Her Composition.

Quite recently a teacher who was giving the children written exercises wrote out this "Wanted" advertisement:

"Wanted—A milliner. Apply by letter to Miss Smith, No. 10 Blank street."

The children had to make application for the position in writing.

One juvenile wrote:

"Dear Miss Smith—I saw you want a milliner. I hate to trim hats. Can't you get somebody else? Please let me know at once."

"Edith Brown."

—Brooklyn Citizen.

And Then, What?

Do you mean to be traveling far, sir?" said the inquisitive man to the other occupant of the railway car on the express from New York to the west.

"Oh, no, only to Chicago," replied the other sarcastically. "I am only a commercial traveler. My age is 26, I am married. My name is Thomas Brown. I have a son 19 years old. He is in the civil service. He gets $10 a week. My father died last July. He was on the stock exchange. My mother is still living. I have a niece with red hair. Our cook is called Jane. Is there anything else?"

The inquisitive man hesitated.

"What all do you use for your tongue?" he inquired slowly.

The Bore.

Bainbridge Colby, the Progressive leader, was talking about vacations.

"Everybody took their vacation at home this year on account of the war," he said. "The vacation stories are just as boring as ever, though."

"A Progressive bored me the other day with descriptions of his vacation in the Yellowstone."

"Before me, Bainbridge," he said, "before me yawned a dreadful precipice 18,000 feet—"

"Hold on, George," said I. "Hold on. What I want to know is this—was the precipice yawning when you got there or did it begin after your arrival?"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

AUTOMOBILE LICENSES.

Renewal Cards for 1917 Licenses Being Sent Out.

The renewal cards for the application of motor vehicle licenses are being sent out by the Automobile Bureau at Albany in order that the work of the department may be facilitated. By the co-operation of the owners of automobiles in securing their renewal cards early and returning them with the license fee, the cost of the automobile department has been reduced $71,015, or from 10 per cent in 1914 to 9 per cent during the current year.

According to figures compiled by the secretary of state, who has charge of the automobile bureau, from February 1 until September 1, a period of seven months, there were registered in that 288,445 automobiles, owners and dealers, 23,077 chauffeurs and 23,400 motorcycle-ists.

The total receipts for that period were $2,460,549.75, an increase of 38 per cent over the corresponding period of last year. The indications are that the coming year will be still larger than 1915 in point of number of vehicles registered.

Under a recent law, one-half of the registration fees of the motor vehicles are returned to the county for use in improving the roads and as Ulster county has an exceptionally large registration, the moneys returned will be considerable.

The past year is the first that motorcycle riders have been compelled to secure licenses, although in other states they have been paying license fees for some time.

When will the Canal be opened?

All New York State is interested in the answer. All New York is interested in seeing the work go forward rapidly, efficiently and as economically as is consistent with good engineering.

It is well understood that despite the reduction in salary expense to the State of more than half a million dollars, the Barge Canal work has gone forward in the past two years more rapidly than in the preceding four year period. As a result of this progress it is promised that the Barge Canal, the greatest artificial waterway in the world, will be completed and open for navigation in 1918.

A few of the important advances in the work accomplished by State Engineer FRANK M. WILLIAMS are:

Saving in Department Expenses

AS SOON as he had assumed office State Engineer Williams conferred with Governor Whitman on a plan for economy in conducting his department and there followed a consolidation of bureaus which reduced the engineering cost by $479,697.27 on the Erie, Champlain and Oswego Canal work in 1915, as compared with the cost in 1914.

Including reductions made on the Cayuga-Seneca Canal, the total saving to the State in salary expense was $505,939.00.

Found the Work at Loose Ends

MR. WILLIAMS found that the original one hundred and one million dollar bond issue of 1903 had not only been expended or obligated but that the Democratic administration had awarded contracts exceeding the issue, while several incomplete sections of the canals were not under contract at all.

To put the work on an efficient, businesslike basis, to carry on construction and to pay for the contracts already awarded, the Legislature was compelled to appropriate $3,654,000.00. It was also necessary to refer the question of raising $27,000,000.00 to complete the canal system and to pay the claims against the State for canal property and damages, to the voters at the last election.

Solving of Crossing Problems

THE State Engineer has succeeded in making agreements covering all of the important crossings of the canals with railroads.

These problems remained practically at a standstill for four years and until these crossings were provided for, the canal could not have been opened.

The work State Engineer Williams and his department has done in clearing up the perplexing problem of canal crossings is typical of the efficiency with which the State Engineer's Department has been conducted.

And the excellent record made by State Engineer Williams is just one more example of the constructive work accomplished during the past two years by your present administration under the leadership of Governor Charles S. Whitman.

The present administration DESERVES YOUR SUPPORT at the polls no matter what your "politics" may be.

STANDS HIGH WITH HIS HOME PEOPLE

Charles E. Nichols a Man Loved and Respected by His Fellow Citizens of Schoharie County—Deserves Support of Good Citizens of District.

When a man has resided fifty-four years in the place of his nativity, when regardless of political affiliations, the citizens of that place and county are of one mind, that he is honest, clean and able, when he is loved in his home, respected by his business associates, honored by his townsmen, church and lodge, his services sought in every important litigation in his county—when a man of such moral fibre, legal learning and ability is nominated for an office, good citizenship should give its vote and support. Such a man is Hon. Charles E. Nichols of Jefferson, this county, candidate for the office of Justice of the Supreme Court of the Third Judicial District, says the Cobleskill Times.

We in this county know him. From boyhood to beyond the half century mark he has been with us. Here his reputation as a lawyer of ability and learning is of common knowledge. Here his splendid qualities of citizenship, his honesty, his level common sense, his unfailing courtesy to rich and to poor, need no recounting.

But we want to reach and assure every voter in the Third Judicial District that Hon. Charles E. Nichols is every inch a man; that his ability and learning will bring honor to the bench; that his courtesy will reach every member of the bar; that his rare good judgment and integrity of character will protect every litigant whose cause is just.

Counselor Nichols is a man of sturdy build, with mind as vigorous as his body. An unassuming man, an excellent listener, he does not believe that he knows more than all the lawyers of the Judicial District put together. He is a man of fine mental balance, of judicial temperament—par excellence. Every judge in this Judicial District will commend his industry; his causes are prepared thoroughly and exhaustively; they are tried with skill and keen perception of the vital points.

A plain man of the people, his election would mean a plain judge for the people.

The Cigar Stores Corporation, with principal office at Eddyville, has filed a certificate of incorporation with the secretary of state at Albany and in the Ulster county clerk's office. The company has a capital of $1,500,000, consisting of 15,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, of which $500,000 is six per cent cumulative preferred stock and the balance is common stock. The directors are Arthur W. Britton, Samuel B. Howard and L. H. Gunther, all of New York city.

BACK TO THE BREAD LINE IF WILSON'S TARIFF IS NOT REPEALED

PRESIDENT WILSON: You are boasting to the voters, through your Department of Commerce and Bureau of Labor, what your Administration and Congress have done for American wage-earners in work provided and payrolls increased for them.

One of your Labor Bureau Bulletins tells of the hundreds of thousands of unemployed bread-winners put to work in the latter part of your term.

But it is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that all of these bread-winners had full employment when you took office and lost that employment by reason of the tariff legislation enacted at your dictation.

You know it is a fact that in the fall of 1914 those hundreds of thousands of American wage-earners were out of work because of the tariff, framed, enacted and put into operation under your personal supervision and at your behest.

It is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that while foreign goods were checked from pouring into our markets by the American tariff system of the Republican party, this country bought abroad in 1912, $581,000,000 less goods than it sold abroad.

It is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that in the first six months of 1913, during four months of which you were President, but during all of which the Republican tariff was still in operation, our imports were $286,000,000 lower than our exports.

It is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that in the whole year of 1913, during ten months of which you were President, but during only three months of which your tariff was in operation, our imports were $691,000,000 lower than our exports.

But it is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that in the first six months of 1914, with your tariff in operation all those months, this country followed the deadly path of larger and larger imports, driving American industries out of business and American wage-earners out of work, in favor of foreign capital and foreign labor.

It is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that in January, 1913, under the Republican tariff, we sold abroad, $64,000,000 more than we bought abroad; but in January, 1914, under your tariff, only $49,000,000 more.

That in February, 1913, under the Republican tariff, we sold abroad $44,000,000 more than we bought abroad, but in February, 1914, under your tariff, only $25,000,000.

That in March, 1913, under the Republican tariff, we sold abroad $31,000,000 more than we bought abroad, but in March, 1914, under your tariff, only $4,900,000.

That in April, 1913, under the Republican tariff, we sold abroad $53,000,000 more than we bought abroad, but in April, 1914, under your tariff, we bought abroad $11,000,000 more than we sold abroad.

It is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that in the five months from April to August, 1913, inclusive, under the Republican tariff, we sold abroad $218,000,000 more than we bought abroad, but in the corresponding months of 1914, under your tariff, we bought abroad $39,000,000 more than we sold abroad.

It is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that your tariff ceased to work havoc with American industries and business and to impoverish American labor only when the war came to dam off, at the source abroad, those CHEAP LABOR IMPORTS which you had allowed to flood our markets.

It is a fact, and you know it is a fact, that it was the war which put our wage-earners back to work, in spite of your tariff, but that the moment the war stops thousands of munition plants will go out of business and hundreds of thousands of wage-earners employed in them will go off their payrolls.

And more,—that many other industries now supported by the day and night activity of our munition plants and by the vast earning power of the wage-earners in them will be compelled to close down in part or in whole.

Then when those hundreds of thousands of our own wage-earners suddenly lose their employment and the twelve to twenty million wage-earners of the Old World now engaged in war return to their normal occupations, and their surplus products of peace are allowed to flood into this country again as they were flooding in until the outbreak of the war, the work of ruining American industries, which was begun by your tariff before the war, must be completed after the war; the American wage-earners put into the bread-line by your tariff but taken out by the war, must, with peace restored, go back into that bread-line of your making in 1914.

Therefore, President Wilson, when you ask American wage-earners to vote, on November 7th, for your tariff, you ask them to vote to live in a Fool's Paradise of war trade for mere months or weeks, only to be plunged by that tariff immediately afterward back into pauperism and the bread line.

FRANKNESS AS AN ASSET TO HEALTH

Publicity Pays as Preventative of Epidemics Says Expert at Cincinnati—New York's Experience With Plague Is Cited.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Cincinnati, O., Oct. 31.—Absolute frankness with the public on all phases of local health work (through the newspapers) was urged today by Dr. John F. Anderson, president of the American Public Health Association, in session in this city.

"The old attitude of concealment is rapidly giving way before a new appreciation by health departments of the value of frankness in the handling of epidemics," said Dr. Anderson. "The progress of the new idea, however, must be greatly accelerated if we are to avoid the many evil effects of the policy of concealment."

"The recent epidemic of poliomyelitis in New York city is a most impressive example of the value of frankness. Health Commissioner Emerson is to be congratulated on his handling of the situation. The daily statements of the progress of the epidemic given so frankly and freely to the people of the city, had three very notable results."

"First, it resulted in hundreds of cases being reported that would not otherwise be brought to the attention of the department."

"Second, it caused parents to exercise unusual care of their children which in turn resulted in their bringing to the attention of physicians even slight symptoms of illness which frequently resulted in early diagnosis of paralysis and consequently successful treatment, where delay might have resulted otherwise."

"Third, the health department so established itself in the confidence of the people that any announcement made in regard to the epidemic was accepted as authoritative. Thus it was that when the department announced that the situation was growing better, people of the city believed it and acted upon its advice to open the schools. Children were brought back to town and permitted to attend school."

"These very striking examples of taking the public into the confidence of a health department may well be adopted as a guiding example by health departments who still cling to the notion that concealment of epidemics benefits the community."

"Epidemics are, in one respect, like compressed air in a tank. You can keep it in the tank up to a certain pressure point then the tank will burst. The greater the pressure the louder will be the noise and the greater the damage. Damage resulting from sudden explosion of an epidemic has been the experience of every city that has tried to conceal epidemic facts."

Owing to the greatly increased cost of quality tobaccos, in fact, everything pertaining to high grade cigars, the makers of the San Felice brand, The Dessel-Wemmer Company, have advanced the selling price to the jobbers and dealers, and henceforth this cigar will positively be sold to the consumer at 5 cents straight instead of six for a quarter, as previously.

The SAN FELICE is national in its scope and character, having just attained this eminence through its unexcelled excellence. To maintain this unequalled standard of quality, the advance in question is absolutely unavoidable. The generous support of all men using quality cigars is earnestly desired.

NOTED SPECIALIST

Will see patients in Kingston EVERY FRIDAY AT 340 BROADWAY

Dr. Swinburne of Albany MAKES IMPORTANT DISCOVERY

The most important discovery in medical science of modern times is that of the Albany Specialist who has evolved relief and cure for chronic sufferings for many of the most common and dreaded ills of mankind.

The specialist is a man of broad experience and high technical education. His work is based on the truth that 90 per cent of all ills which result into chronic ailments, originate from the stomach. His efforts to find a cure for a disordered system have been richly rewarded and he has to his credit many that are little short of wonderful. It has been his common experience to have cases despaired of by patient and former doctors and in short time to effect a lasting, permanent cure.

The doctor says: Stomach trouble is the cause of nine-tenths of all sickness, and unless the stomach performs its functions properly you cannot enjoy health. In the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal disorders, this doctor's methods will produce remarkable results and enable patients who have suffered for years from indigestion, headache, nervousness or irregular bowel functions to realize permanent relief.

No matter how much you are suffering or how severe your trouble may be, you have not half tried to get well unless you have given this noted specialist a trial. It will cost nothing to see the doctor and talk over your trouble, and if you desire to take treatment the charges will be reasonable.

The doctor has permanent offices at 340 Broadway, Kingston, where patients can secure consultation on Friday from 9 to 12 a. m., and 1 to 4 p. m. Also Thursday evenings, 8:30 to 8 p. m.

AN ORCHESTRA OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS

The Germania, of which the Father of Mrs. George Chandler Was Konzertmeister—Picture Made in 1848 on Display.

In the window of the L. B. Van Wagenen Co.'s store is a picture which cannot fail to interest all lovers of orchestral music in the city.

It is a picture of the old Germania Orchestra which came to Boston in the fall of 1848 and by its artistic interpretations of classical music, and its inauguration of the popular public afternoon recital which has since become an institution in Boston, made of that city the musical center it has been ever since.

The picture is of particular interest just here and now, because the leader of that old orchestra, Bergmann, afterward became conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, a position which he held many years. The Philharmonic orchestra is booked to give a concert here on Thursday at the high school and a picture of the present orchestra makes an interesting comparison with the old Boston organization nearly seventy years ago.

The Germania was a tremendous success throughout New England in those old days. Subscription lists twenty feet long (no exaggeration) could be seen in the music stores for a series of weekly concerts; their summers were booked in fashionable Newport, and their concerts were the sensation of the day.

The success of the Germania was the cause of much trumpeting all over Europe that America was a country that wanted good music and would pay for it. Germany, Austria, France and Italy were in a frightful political condition at that time brought on by the epidemic of revolution which was in plainer language an aspiration for freedom, and the result was a great immigration of good musicians to America. The Germania might therefore be called the parent of most of the fine orchestras which succeeded her in after years.

Kingston people who remember Carl Zerrahn, the great conductor, whose big personality and fine musicianship made the musical festival here many years ago a great success, will be interested to see his youthful figure at the extreme left of this group. Zerrahn came to America with the Germania as flutist, and only took up the conductor's baton when the orchestra disbanded in 1855.

The first violin and Konzertmeister of the old Germania, William Schultze, was the father of Mrs. George Chandler of this city. He afterward became the first violin of the Mendelssohn Quintette Club, an organization which was famous throughout the country in the early seventies. Later he founded the musical department of the Fine Arts College of Syracuse University. In fact most of the members of the old Germania became in later years leaders and organizers of musical institutions which survive to this day.

A picture like this one was shown last winter in Boston in the music store of Oliver Ditson and was surrounded by crowds of interested people constantly during the week of its exhibition there. There are only a few copies of this old group in existence. The one shown in Van Wagenen's window is the property of Mrs. Chandler and loaned by her to Mr. Dodge for the purpose of arousing an added interest in the Philharmonic Orchestra whose concert here this week is a musical opportunity the importance of which cannot be overestimated.

BONTICOU.
Bonticou, Oct. 30.—Hurrah for Bonticou school! It had the honor of winning first prize at the agricultural contest exhibit held at the Grange Hall in Ulster Park on Friday, October 27.

John Ferguson, the finest beef-raiser in the town of Esopus, is the proud possessor of a shining five dollar gold piece, the highest award.

His teacher, Miss F. Frers, and the school rejoice in having in their midst a youngster who is such a careful farmer.

John is only eleven years old now. Last year he won the first prize in gathering the greatest number of apple tree tent caterpillar egg masses.

That shows that a little timely effort brings big results. We hope that John will keep up the good work.

Prizes seem to be coming Bonticou's way. Woodcrest cattle which had been at the New England dairy show in Springfield, Mass., returned with four prize winning cattle out of the five that went.

We all extend our sympathy to Mrs. Aaron Van Kleeck in her recent bereavement. Her father, Mr. Ambrose, was one of the oldest and most esteemed men of Rifton.

WHITFIELD.

Whitfield, Oct. 31.—Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Rider are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a daughter at their home Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Black of Creek Locks were callers at the Idylkrest farm Sunday afternoon.

Arthur Chambers is spending a few days at his home in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wager spent Sunday out of town.

Samuel Haines and grandson, Samuel Carmon, of St. Remy were guests at the Idylkrest farm over Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Alex Brum of Leibhardt spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Simon Hornbeck.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Davis spent last Friday afternoon in Kerhonkson. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Roebkrane spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Dunn at Pataunk.

A SOLDIER'S APPRECIATION.

Kingston Woman Hears From Comrades Joly and Jacot.

Early last summer, the members of Witwyck Chapter, D. A. R., made and sent to the front, a number of "Comfort Kits" for the soldiers. Many of the kits contained postal cards with the name and address of the maker and sender. Several of the ladies who took part in this work, have had in return, postals expressing the gratitude of some soldier who was so fortunate as to receive one of the kits.

But Mrs. Jessie G. Preston, received more than a postal; a remarkably interesting letter, written by Corporal H. Jacot, for the man who received the gift. The letter follows:

September 29, 1916.

Dear Madame:
I write you in the name of my friend Marcelin Joly of the 9th Cy. of the Foreign Legion, to thank you for a package he received together with your postal card inclosed, as he left the hospital. He is a friend and countryman of mine (we are Swiss) but as he does not know English, I replace him in the agreeable task of sending you thanks.

We were wounded at the same time in the attack of Belloy on Santerre in the Somme on the 4th of July. Everyone celebrates this day in his own way, but ours was somewhat more noisy and deadly than an ordinary 4th of July in peaceful U. S. A.

It was a grand day; in an hour we had taken the defenses and the village; it was in the afternoon, but we fought till night in the outskirts and take the castle. We held all the ground and took 750 prisoners.

At night, during the counter attack, Joly and myself were wounded, both in the legs, he by a bullet and I by shrapnel, and in the tumult of this carnival I lost him.

The emergency ambulance was overcrowded, furthermore it was bombarded, so I managed to limp back across the battlefield using two guns as crutches. The trip was well worth making; I have seen several battlefields in this war, but never such a grand, imposing and yet awful scenery.

Dark clouds in the sky were illuminated by fuses and candles flying like comets from the fighting line to keep the little game going; the burning remains of a dozen villages and farms gave the impression of the last act of some great cataclysm (in fact it was one of the first acts); the lightnings and thunders of hundreds, perhaps thousands of cannons vomiting incessantly and the explosion of the shells, saying nothing of the musketry and machine guns, created such a charivari that would have covered the voice of an excited Methodist negro preacher, and in the interminable the desperate cry of the poor chaps calling for drink or stretcher bearer. Here and there from a human form on the ground or from the darkness of a cavern the distant cry of those who won't see the sunrise. Battle, war, sufferings, in a word, life, will be over for them; their souls with the thousands that fell on that battlefield on the 4th of July, will pierce the dark clouds to go where? Who knows?

By day break, I reached an automobile station and with a relief sigh, said good bye to the furnace. After extraction of the bullet, two weeks in bed, three weeks on crutches and a month convalescence on the beach of Paris-Plage, seemed heaven after hell. But it was too good to last. Completely mended, I was reminded that the "Boches" are still in France and slowly, for the military trains don't run away here, I travelled back to duty. On arriving at the regiment, the Colonel asked me to act as his secretary and I accepted with both hands, for winter is at the door and I guess the boss is not going to spend it in the worst dugout.

A few days afterward came Joly. Three nights ago he told me about the package given to him at departure from his hospital, handed me your postal card, and this is how you happen to receive these lines of which you will please excuse the mistakes and see in them only the appreciation and thankfulness of Yours truly, (Signed) H. Jacot and Marcelin Joly.

In addition to the interest attached to the letter itself, Mrs. Preston thought that such appreciation might prove an inspiration to others to do what they could for the men of the Allied countries now risking their life in this fearful warfare.

This Little Movie Favorite Is of the "Golden Aureole" Type

Lillian Gish, Quaint, Dainty and Piquant, Is Prettiest of the Blondes in Picture World

She Plays Part of the Northern Heroine in "The Birth of a Nation"

MUCH of the tenderly poetic appeal of "The Birth of a Nation" is due to the subtle acting of Miss Lillian Gish in the part of Elsie Stoneman, the Northern heroine. Miss Gish is a little creature of the "golden aureole" blond type, which makes for photographic beauty. She is singularly graceful, and her features never lose their piquancy. Her eyes before the camera are singularly expressive, and her acting conveys sincerity as well as true feminine charm.

Perhaps the most poetical scene of the entire drama is the one in which she and Henry Walthall, as her Southern lover, pour out their hearts to each other through the agency of the ancient symbol of Venus, goddess of romance, the dove. Not daring, at this point in their courtship to kiss each other, they lavish their affections alternately on the nesting bird. Another scene in which Miss Gish displays her exquisite charm is the one in which she plays with a kitten with such grace and caressing meaning that the audience invariably experiences a delightful thrill of sympathy.

Miss Gish is sharply contrasted in "The Birth of a Nation" with the beautiful brunette, Miss Miriam Cooper, who plays the Southern heroine. The little Northern heroine is of Northern birth, just as Miss Cooper is a Southerner, her native State being Ohio. For a time in her early girlhood she and her sister Dorothy, also famous in the moving picture world, lived in Mississippi with their mother.

Miss Gish, when a mere child, won fame on the stage as a dancer and became a member of the ballet in one of Sarah Bernhardt's productions. She was introduced to D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," by Mary Pickford. Mr. Griffith instantly recognized her talent and rapidly promoted her in picture after picture, until he finally cast her in her present role of the Northern heroine in "The Birth of a Nation."

Teachers and Officers Meet.
There was a meeting of the teachers of the Rondout Presbyterian Sunday School held on Monday evening at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Charles G. Ellis. Following the business session, in which arrangements were completed for Rally day for the Sunday school, next Sunday, a social refreshment was enjoyed, the hostess serving refreshments. One feature of the evening, not at all in keeping with the happiness of the event, was the resignation of M. F. Wygant, superintendent of the Sunday School, who was obliged, on account of recent illness, to surrender his office. His resignation was accepted with regret, and all good wishes for a speedy and full recovery of his health were extended to Mr. Wygant.

Child Died of Burns.
Despite the efforts of Dr. J. W. Baker to save the life of the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Roberts of "Little Italy," Highland, the boy died yesterday following severe burns he received Saturday when his clothes caught fire from a bonfire of the Sunday School, which was being held on the west side of the street. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts to surrender his office. His resignation was accepted with regret, and all good wishes for a speedy and full recovery of his health were extended to Mr. Wygant.

ELLENVILLE

Ellenville, Oct. 31.—The annual banquet of Pythian Sisters of Awaiting Temple, No. 1, was held at their rooms Thursday evening, October 26. There was a large attendance of members and each member invited one guest. No out of town members of other temples attended this year. The regular business meeting was followed by a very excellent entertainment. The program was arranged by M. of R. & C., which was given and very much enjoyed by all.

Piano Solo.... Gladys Schoonmaker. Recitation, "My Dollie," Susie Brown. Vocal Solo, "Thy Will Be Done," Mrs. Jacob Wyman. Reading, "My Photograph Album," Mrs. Ira Schoonmaker. Piano Solo.... Following the entertainment the committee in charge, Mrs. Mary Haskins, Mrs. Jacob Wyman and Miss Sophie Zupp, a very fine banquet was served and this was followed by a social hour coupled with music, games and dancing. All departing voted the evening to have been an enjoyable one spent together.

The annual banquet of Scoresby was held at their club house Saturday evening. It was a pig roast this year and was considered excellent by those in attendance. Active members, honorary members and members of the board of trustees of the village, seventy-two in all. After an hour or more at games with social intercourse, at 9:30 o'clock the entire company went to the dining hall and were seated and the following menu was most faultlessly served: Roast pig, oyster dressing, mashed potatoes and onions, cabbage and celery salad, apple sauce, sweet elder, pickles, olives, celery, ice cream, cake, coffee and cigars. Much credit is due the chairman, Fred Freer, and a corps of valued assistants, for the success of the fine banquet served. Following the banquet the president of Scoresby, John A. Tice, addressed the gentlemen present along different lines pertaining to the company, its work, etc., and he was followed by short talks from several gentlemen at the tables. As good nights were said, the affair was voted by one and all to have been a most enjoyable affair.

Artist E. L. Henry and Mrs. Henry have returned to New York after spending some days in Ellenville as guests at the Sherry cottage on Center street.

Secretary John A. Tice of the Savings Bank and Mrs. Tice celebrated the twenty-first anniversary of their marriage quietly at their home on Center street Sunday, October 29. Mrs. John P. Norbury and Miss Bradford are spending the week in New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Schoonmaker, of North Main street, have gone to Long Branch, New Jersey, to attend the funeral of their cousin, Horace Curtiss. Mr. Curtiss is well known to many in Ellenville, having spent with his wife many summers in town as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Schoonmaker.

Mrs. Guernsey Lake, of Walden, is visiting her brother, Ira Schoonmaker, and family on Main street.

Mrs. Robert McCartney and two children are visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Brady, in Middletown.

Joseph F. Kopf, a veteran of the Civil War, also a member of the Masonic Lodge, died at his home on Railroad avenue, Ellenville, Sunday morning. Surviving are his wife and two sons, one residing in Ellenville.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon under the direction of the Masons and interment will be in Forest Hill cemetery.

There was an unusually large attendance at the first annual social of the Musical Club given at St. John's Episcopal Church Monday evening. The entire program as arranged was given. All the numbers taken from offertory by Miss Hobson, organist of church until the closing number. The march from Sonata Opus 35, Chopin, played by Frank J. Campbell, organist of the M. E. Church received very high praise and was enjoyed. This club organized under the direction of Mrs. Henry Horton a few months ago has met with marked success.

The Rev. Walter S. Maines delivered two very able sermons at the Reformed Church on Sunday. The theme for the morning was "The Element of His in Religion" and on an evening, "Jesus Christ and the Criminal." There were large congregations in attendance both morning and evening.

At St. Mary's Church on Wednesday All Saints' day will be observed by a mass at 8 o'clock. It being a holy day of obligation. Thursday is All Souls' Day and mass will be observed at 6 and 8 o'clock in Ellenville and at 10 o'clock at Mountaindale.

The Rev. Dr. Lawrence of Hudson, N. Y., occupied the pulpit of the Lutheran church on Sunday morning and evening.

Sheridan Oeden and two little sons of New York spent Sunday with his parents on Center street. There were large congregations in attendance at the M. E. Church on Sunday. Sermons by the pastor, the Rev. W. H. Moser. The newly organized choir, under the direction of Mrs. E. B. Kimble and Mrs. J. H. Divino, was ably assisted by Mrs. Grace McLaughlin of Monticello, who also contributed solos at morning and evening service very much delighting all who were privileged to hear her. Mrs. McLaughlin has been chorister of the M. E. Church choir at Monticello for several years.

He Shot a Deer.

Dr. Maurice Ashley, superintendent of the Middletown State Hospital, returned from a vacation at Glens Falls. While there Dr. Ashley went hunting and succeeded in bringing down a fine buck deer with four-pronged antlers. The buck weighed 240 pounds and was shot through the head.

SAUGERTIES

Saugerties, Oct. 31.—The concrete bridge over the Sawkill creek on the Madsen road will be an ornament to our village when completed. The favorable weather has enabled the contractor to make considerable progress in its construction. The iron bridge, built in 1882, which it will replace, has been purchased by Martin Cantine, who will have it set up on his farm property, which lies on both sides of the Sawkill creek near the new structure.

The Saugerties Concert Band of 25 pieces has been engaged to furnish music at the Republican meeting and reception to be tendered Hon. Charles E. Hughes at Kingston on Friday morning of this week. The Misses Jennie, Hanna and Fannie Post delightfully entertained a party of their friends at their home on Ulster avenue on Monday evening. Halloween decorations were profusely displayed through the house. A delightful repast was enjoyed.

Miss Edith Van Gelder spent Tuesday in New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Van Steenberg enjoyed the Prince of Pilsen at the Kingston opera house last evening.

John Fitzgerald, special delivery carrier in the Saugerties post office, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday while riding a bicycle. He collided with an automobile driven by Dr. Emerick and was but slightly injured.

Owing to a rush of business, the factory of Montgomery, Washburn Co., work until 10 o'clock evenings. Over 2,300 voters are registered in the town of Saugerties.

A Fallen Singer.

The horse driven by the traveling agent of the Singer Sewing Machine Company slipped on the wet pavements at the corner of John street and Clinton avenue this morning and fell. After a large crowd had collected and given sufficient advice on raising fallen horses, the animal was gotten on its feet and immediately fell again. A quantity of ashes was secured and sprinkled on the pavement and the horse again gotten on its feet. The horse had apparently been recently shod and was reasonably sharp, however, the driver in order to be on the safe side started off leading the horse down the sidewalk, leaving the wagon in the street.

Joy Riding in Scudder's Ford.

Certain men, presumed to be young men, have been taking advantage of the absence of Organist Samuel D. Scudder, during services in Trinity P. E. Church, the past few Sundays and have gone "joy riding" in Mr. Scudder's Ford. Not content with this, they have tried their "mechanical genius" and done some damage to the car. The perpetrators have also been making a nuisance of themselves around the church and neighboring properties and the police have been notified and the crowd will be rounded up.—Saugerties Post.

What's your foot trouble?

Nearly all foot troubles, such as callouses, bunions, broken-down arch, run-over heel etc., are due to some bone of the foot being out of normal position.

HUGHES WOULD MAINTAIN ALL NEUTRAL RIGHTS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Columbus, Ind., Oct. 31.—His position regarding an arms embargo and the warning of Americans of ships of belligerent nations was stated plainly here today by Charles Evans Hughes after his speech had been interrupted with a question regarding these things.

Mr. Hughes had been discussing the foreign policies of the Wilson administration.

"I am your personal admirer. May I ask you a question?" called out a man in the back of the crowd. "Certainly," replied the candidate. The crowd made an effort to stop the questioner.

"Let him alone. Let him ask his question," commanded Mr. Hughes. Then to a policeman who had seized the interrupter, he called out: "Officer, let the gentleman proceed. Now, sir, go ahead."

"In the event of your election," then asked the questioner, "will you or will you not favor an embargo against the shipment of munitions from this country to Europe or the passage of a war resolution warning Americans not to travel on ships owned by nations at war?"

Mr. Hughes answered promptly. "I am, sir, in favor of the maintenance of every right, including the right of travel and the right of shipment. It is a very important right that we have as a neutral nation, and it is very important that at this time when the great war is raging we should maintain the integrity of international law. To my mind it is a very thoughtful policy that would surrender any of these important rights because of any sentimental consideration when we have the vast necessities of neutral commerce and the importance of the rights of neutrals to consider with respect to the future of the United States."

Probably 20,000 persons greeted the candidate here. All shops, schools and stores were closed and farmers were here from all the surrounding territory. A parade preceded Mr. Hughes' speech, which was delivered from a stand in the city park. "Peace and false prosperity" were his topics.

SLIZEWSKI HAS FRACTURED SKULL

Frank Slizewski, of No. 199 Gross street, while at work on a barge at the Schoonmaker & Connors boat yard on the Rondout creek made a mistake and fell a distance of about twenty-five feet, hitting on the back of his head. Stern attended him and found that Slizewski had sustained a fracture at the base of the skull. His condition is serious.

TRY YOUR MIND WITH THESE PUZZLERS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Chicago, Oct. 31.—Freshmen in the University of Chicago must undergo mental tests to determine just how bright they are. After that has been ascertained they are expected to maintain the same standard throughout their entire college course.

Stopwatch in hand, Dr. Henry B. Kitson stands over each student and reads a passage from a book. The student must repeat it. Then the student must read a passage from a book and repeat it without looking at the book again. A number of letters with different addresses are given him and he must arrange them alphabetically. The time required for these and other tests fix his mental powers.

Here is the crowning test of all, however. A number of short sentences are read to the student. Within one second he is expected to indicate by "yes" or "no" whether the statements made in the sentence are logically correct or not. Here are a few samples:

"He was 70 and looked twice that age."

"He lit his cigar with these words."

"With one hand he caressed her, with the other he spoke."

"On his helmet waved the missing plume."

"Two adversaries were placed at an equal distance from each other."

"Freshmen are not allowed to wear soft collars or cuffs on their trousers."

"I have never had any children and my mother was afflicted in the same way."

"The woman finished dressing in her evening clothes and came down to breakfast."

Dr. Kitson said he had found one-half of the students judge such things correctly. It is intended by this plan to ascertain the mental horsepower of each student so that the quick ones may not get off with too little work and the slow ones may not be overburdened.

"Mackmen" on the Dobrudja.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

LAUD PRINCETON HEAD

Hugh Jennings Says Many Good Things of Coach Rush.

Compares Baseball and Football and Coaching in General—Leader Must Have Knack of Imparting Knowledge to Players.

Hear Hugh Jennings on John Rush, the Princeton coach, and football coaching in general!

"I've never met Rush, but I have heard a lot about him, and I guess he has got the right sort of stuff. I heard at first that Rush had never played football, but I understand that he has; that is, he played in 'prep' school and on scrub teams at college.

Football and baseball are alike in some ways. I don't think a man could teach football very well if he had never played the game at all, but I doubt if it is necessary for him to have played on a college varsity team. If he has the right kind of brains in his head and is a good leader, he ought to do.

Where a lot of these colleges make a mistake, it strikes me, is in choosing men without sizing up their mental ability. They look for a star who played last season or fifteen years ago, perhaps, and think just because he could get over the ground or could throw all his opponents out of the way, he ought to be a good coach.

A baseball manager and a football coach have got to know the game from top to bottom and must have the knack of imparting that knowledge to others, and, in the bargain, must understand a whole lot about human nature. And he has got to have a sort of personality that will convince the boys that he knows what he is doing and talking about. You can't get away from that. Rush is that type, I hear, and if that is so, he certainly ought to make things go at Princeton. The college boys, however, have got to let him alone. There's the big trouble with lots of these football systems.

The boys never give a coach a show to make good. If he can produce a winning team he is all right; if not, he's down and out. A coach, if he is the right sort, should get a good lengthy contract with the college he is going to. Then he will have to make good. If Rush sticks to his job Princeton ought to get out of its bad rut. That is, if Rush is the type they say he is."

PING BODIE'S EYESIGHT

Scout Eddie Herr of the St. Louis Cardinals was out in San Francisco, watching Ping Bodie to determine if Ping was a prospective comeback and would be of value to the Cardinals next year. He decided to ask Bodie his own opinion of it.

"How's your eye, now, Ping?" asked Herr, to start the conversation.

"Eye? My eye?" answered Ping. "Say, I can count the nail heads in that center field fence from here at the plate."

"How do you hit 'em in Salt Lake," asked Herr.

"Great," answered Ping, as he fondled his bat. "Say, that high multitude in them mountains in Salt Lake is made to order for me."

The Silver Shawl

Queer Adventure of an American in the Turkish Hills

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It was in Constantinople on the steps of the Mosque of St. Sophia that Dick Moreland ran into the arms of his ancient enemy, Piny Brown.

"Hello, Moreland!" frowned the sinister older man.

"Ah—er—why it's Piny Brown!" ejaculated Dick, with a sudden vivid recollection of a lonely country road, a girl's frightened scream and his own strong right arm sending Piny's evil face to the dust with a well directed blow.

Of course Piny had never forgiven or forgotten. Yet here he was now, smiling, with outstretched hand.

Dick shook hands gingerly. "You're a long way from home," he said stiffly.

"I'm collecting for the Bosphorus museum," explained Piny. "Been up back in the Beirut district—God-forsaken hole, too! Lived on bean curd and goat's milk and melons. (Wee!)"

"I'm off that way myself tomorrow," remarked Dick. "I've heard the scenery is magnificent."

"Got your painting kit, I see," rejoined Brown.

Dick shifted his easel and paint box to the other hand. "Paying for my bread and butter as I go along," he grinned. "Well, goodbye, Brown."

"Goodbye," said the other; then he stopped and called sharply, "Oh, I say, Moreland!"

"Yes?" Dick turned around.

"If you're up in the Beirut district be sure to stop at El Drogor, a scrap of a village on the mountain where they make the most wonderful shawls in the world. Ask for Achmed Haroun and say I sent word he was to show you the silver shawl."

"The silver shawl? Sounds rather interesting."

"It is interesting," Brown's dry cackling laugh echoed down the empty street.

Dick stared after him with curling lip.

"Poor old duffer!" he muttered. "His efforts to be agreeable sound like the evil calculations of the villain in the play."

Dick Moreland thought little more of Piny Brown, so unexpectedly met in this far-off corner of the world. There were plenty of American tourists in Constantinople in these days before the great war, and he had run across several acquaintances in his wanderings. Now his mind was engaged in wondering for the first time since he came into the Beirut hills. He had seen a pack and a donkey to carry his pack and Achmed, a sleepy-eyed dragon, as guide.

The next morning they started, with the Bosphorus shimmering with the first rays of the sun. From a hundred minarets came the queer chanting call of Muezzins summoning the world to prayer. Birds sang in the thorn bushes beside the road, and the smell of jasmine and roses was painfully sweet.

Dick whistled with the very joy of living, while his eyes roved, ever searching for some subject for his brush. He passed by many a picturesque villa, walled with white stucco and flowers and dusty caravans wending their way across the desert. No matter how he longed to stop and paint these alluring things, he had set himself a task—to paint the wild ruggedness of the Beirut hills, their fierce fantasy of crag and peak and crinkling water.

At sunset or a few minutes after the faithful had turned their faces toward Mecca, Dick knocked three times at the closed door of Achmed's shop. It opened noiselessly, and he entered to find the shop dark, but a light shining through parted curtains at the back. The light came from a lamp placed far down the length of a narrow corridor that seemed to lead into the heart of the hill.

Achmed was standing by the lamp, his beard gripped tightly in one wrinkled hand, his black eyes blazing with some inward fire.

"You see, I am on time," remarked Dick.

"Effendi is overzealous," remarked Achmed dryly. "Follow me." He led the way down a cross passage and turned again into a damp, earthy smelling room. The beamed ceilings sagged at with the weight of earth above them.

"Rather a damp place to keep shawls," criticized Dick when the rough door had closed behind them. He felt a vague feeling of uneasiness in this underground place. He was glad he had fully armed himself. He told himself rather grimly that Piny Brown would not have sent him to any place for any good. Instinct prompted him to suspect treachery.

"My shawl does not mind the dampness," whined Achmed as he was burrowed in a carved chest in one corner.

"Is it for sale?"

"You mean the silver shawl?"

"Of course. Do you want to sell it?" Achmed laughed easily. "Who would buy?" he cackled. "He who tries it on cannot buy it, for he belongs to it."

"To the silver shawl?"

"To the silver shawl," came back Achmed's muffled voice from the corner where he knelt before the chest.

Dick was not much impressed. He was used to the childish theatrics of the orient, but something in Achmed's voice sent a queer shiver down the American's spine. He wondered if the rugs swaying against the drafts walls concealed assassins. He wondered if

The man shook his head. "One must go to Mecca for these, Effendi."

"Have you ever heard of the silver shawl, Alschid?" asked Dick carelessly. The man uttered a shrill cry, lifted his hands above his head and fled down the steep slope—fled without another word, apparently without thought of his master, the laden pack animal, his own donkey, even his wages.

The last Dick saw of his servant was a slim white shadow streaking across the plain far below. It disappeared in a grove of tamarisks. Over in the far east lay the blue haze that was Constantinople. Beyond that was the Bosphorus.

"The silver shawl!" Dick laughed oddly and looked over at the scattered group of houses called El Drogor. What was there in the mention of the silver shawl that had sent Alschid flying in such blind, unreasoning terror? Was it some native superstition? He resolved to keep his own counsel about the silver shawl until he came face to face with Achmed Haroun, whom Brown had mentioned as the keeper of the shawl.

A bright eyed lad poked an inquisitive head around a bush, and Dick hired him to stay and watch the horses. Then, with the laden pack animal in train, he entered the village and inquired the way to the house of Achmed Haroun.

Achmed Haroun was not a dealer in shawls, as might have been expected. He was a beater of gold and silver and copper, and his tiny cave-like shop hollowed out of the rock of the hillside showed shelves of exquisitely wrought and pierced metal work. He was working on the handle of a scimitar, striking tiny musical blows with minute tools. His long white beard was tied up on a knot out of the way, and his turban showed the green emblem of a pilgrim to Mecca.

"Is this the house of Achmed Haroun?" asked Dick, bending his tall head to enter the doorway.

The old Turk bowed gravely and pointed to the rug before his low table.

"Be seated, Effendi," he said courteously.

"You are a maker of shawls?" asked Dick, sitting down and lighting a cigar. Achmed shook his head. "I am a beater of metals," he said, with a sort of haughty pride.

"Perhaps I've made a mistake. I'm sure Brown said it was the house of Achmed Haroun," muttered Dick.

"Brown? You speak of Effendi Brown?" demanded the old man eagerly.

"Yes," he said to tell you to show me the silver shawl."

A silence fell upon the little shop. Achmed's wrinkled hands fell nervelessly to the table. The little tools tinkled as they scattered; it almost seemed as though the two men ceased to breathe. Achmed's eyes gleamed like twin coals of fire; his pasty face was drawn in fear.

Dick sat rigidly, wondering what had happened to paralyze Achmed with fear. He was sure that the old man had sent Alschid with flying feet toward home? Was it the mention of the silver shawl? What strange thing was this that galvanized one man and paralyzed another?

"Well?" he snapped sharply.

Still Achmed stared with burning eyes that bored right through the American's silk shirt collar.

Dick unjoined his tall form. "How about the silver shawl?" he asked in a hoarse voice.

"Hush!" Achmed's voice hissed through the cell. "You really—mean it?" he quavered.

"Why, yes. It's what I came for."

"Return at sundown," advised Achmed. "Knock thrice at my door, Effendi."

"Very well." And Dick went reluctantly.

At sunset or a few minutes after the faithful had turned their faces toward Mecca, Dick knocked three times at the closed door of Achmed's shop. It opened noiselessly, and he entered to find the shop dark, but a light shining through parted curtains at the back. The light came from a lamp placed far down the length of a narrow corridor that seemed to lead into the heart of the hill.

Achmed was standing by the lamp, his beard gripped tightly in one wrinkled hand, his black eyes blazing with some inward fire.

"You see, I am on time," remarked Dick.

"Effendi is overzealous," remarked Achmed dryly. "Follow me." He led the way down a cross passage and turned again into a damp, earthy smelling room. The beamed ceilings sagged at with the weight of earth above them.

"Rather a damp place to keep shawls," criticized Dick when the rough door had closed behind them. He felt a vague feeling of uneasiness in this underground place. He was glad he had fully armed himself. He told himself rather grimly that Piny Brown would not have sent him to any place for any good. Instinct prompted him to suspect treachery.

"My shawl does not mind the dampness," whined Achmed as he was burrowed in a carved chest in one corner.

"Is it for sale?"

"You mean the silver shawl?"

"Of course. Do you want to sell it?" Achmed laughed easily. "Who would buy?" he cackled. "He who tries it on cannot buy it, for he belongs to it."

"To the silver shawl?"

"To the silver shawl," came back Achmed's muffled voice from the corner where he knelt before the chest.

Dick was not much impressed. He was used to the childish theatrics of the orient, but something in Achmed's voice sent a queer shiver down the American's spine. He wondered if the rugs swaying against the drafts walls concealed assassins. He wondered if he was watched by dozens of eyes while he waited for Achmed to bring the silver shawl. His hand gripped his automatic with a degree of comforting assurance.

"Here it is, Effendi," said Achmed, suddenly appearing before him. "This is the silver shawl."

"That—ah!" Dick's voice died away in a sigh of appreciation.

The so called silver shawl was a delicate piece of silver frost work hammered out by Achmed's patient fingers into an exquisite pattern of pomegranate flowers and fruit. Beaten to an incredible thinness, re-enforced by many a hidden ring and bolt, it expressed in its entirety the life work of the metal beater.

Dick exclaimed, admired, adored, and at last Achmed offered to throw it around the American's shoulders.

"Effendi may say he has worn the silver shawl," he said significantly.

"You said, 'He who tries it on cannot buy it, for he belongs to it,'" reminded Dick as Achmed fitted the flexible garment over Dick's broad shoulders and fastened a little clasp in front.

"It's too tight for me," grunted Dick. "Take it off, Achmed."

But Achmed had strangely vanished. The door of exit was closed. The lamp flickered—and the shawl grew tighter every moment! Dick gasped and struggled. His arms were pinioned to his sides. What ailed this queer garment with its powers of contraction? Every expanding movement of his shoulders seemed to set in motion some new mechanism that drew the torture garment tighter about him. He could not move his hands, and the thin sharp edges of the "shawl" cut sharply into the flesh about his neck.

Dick realized that death was near, just as he realized that Piny Brown had wreaked vengeance upon him at last. The silver shawl must be well known in this part of the country, for the very sound of its name had sent Alschid flying toward home.

There was a strange thrumming sound from above; some loose earth rattled down; then the rotting beams fell in with a crash, and Dick Moreland, half blind with pain, looked up into the pale twilight and saw scattered stars, the bulk of waving treetops and a group of faces around the hole in the roof of the cave.

The shrill voice of Alschid, the dragon, came down from above:

"Effendi!"

"Yes," choked Dick feebly.

Alschid dropped down into the hole and five minutes later assisted Dick through the hole in the ceiling. The silver shawl was a bruised and shattered and, let us hope, a harmless remnant of its former self.

When Dick Moreland returned to New York he took with him a new va

HUGHES OVATION
FRIDAY MORNING

The visit of Charles E. Hughes to Kingston on Friday morning will be in the nature of a home-coming and the ovation that will be accorded to him will be one of the most enthusiastic ever given to any Kingston visitor.

Details for the welcome are being perfected and from all parts of Ulster county come reports that indicate a record-breaking crowd in Kingston on Friday morning.

The true holiday spirit has taken firm hold of Kingston, and the city will display its decorations to the best advantage in honor of Mr. Hughes. Kingston is extremely fortunate in being visited by Mr. Hughes, whose personal desire to visit the city selected by his father and mother for their home will be gratified at last. Mr. Hughes personally has always had the kindest feelings for this city and county, where he has spent many happy hours, and in the midst of a busy campaign to be able to visit a city associated with such pleasant memories as he possesses will be extremely gratifying to him. Such gratification is shared by the people of Ulster county, and city and county can be depended on to do their part in expressing their pleasure at his visit.

The automobile escort from the Rhinecliff ferry to the Kingston Opera House, where Mr. Hughes will speak, will be one of the best features of the day. Details for the parade are being arranged today. The automobile owners who take part in the big parade will decorate their cars and it is expected that the entire line of march will be decorated in a fitting manner which will long be remembered by Mr. Hughes and the members of his party and by the hundreds of visitors who will make Kingston their Mecca on Friday.

The meeting at the Kingston Opera House will begin at 10:30 o'clock. Mr. Hughes and the members of his party will be conveyed at once on their arrival from the Rhinecliff ferry to the opera house and when he finishes speaking he will be again conveyed to the ferry and across the river to Rhinecliff to resume his trip.

Music By Wireless.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 31.—Dr. Lee De Forest has just given an exhibition here of the wonders of wireless music. Phonograph records were played in a building in West Thirty-eighth street and distinctly heard in the receiving room at the Hotel Astor, a quarter of a mile away. It is possible to send music 150 miles through the air by the De Forest apparatus. The inventor is soon to install a more powerful sending apparatus in the tower of the Woolworth Building, tallest skyscraper in the world, from which concerts will be heard hundreds of miles out to sea. It is feasible for passengers on an ocean liner to hear the operas at the Metropolitan, even to the applause, Dr. De Forest said today.

A GLANCE

This was a deadlock in the theaters of war. The successes reported were comparatively unimportant.

Heavy fighting continues on most of the fronts, especially in the Roumanian operations where the soldiers are battling in thick fog and blizzards.

The Russian and Roumanian forces have rallied in a desperate effort to throw von Falkenhausen's army back over the border into Hungary and at some points they have made progress.

Another engagement has developed in Dobruja between von Mackensen's army group and the Russo-Roumanian-Serbian forces. Berlin reports the situation there unchanged.

In Macedonia the Serbs and French are attacking in concert. French troops occupied a village and the Serbians advanced slightly on the Tcherma rivers.

On the eastern front Turkish troops made a gain in Galacia at the point of the bayonet and the Germans took several mountain heights from the Russians.

Powerful counter-attacks were delivered by the French on the Somme front last night, but they were unable to dislodge the Germans from Mainmouette Farm.

Since October 10, Von Falkenhausen's Austro-German armies on the Transylvanian front have captured 151 Russo-Roumanian officers and 9,990 men.

Wild Dog Pack Again.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Greenwood Lake, N. J., Oct. 31.—Game Warden Klein will soon start on another expedition with the object of exterminating the great pack of wild dogs now terrorizing a section of this state. Last winter part of the dogs were killed in the woods between here and Lake Mombasha by organized hunters, but the animals are again becoming bold. They attack poultry, stock and occasionally humans. Recently they attempted to pull down a gardener on the Hewitt estate in Ringwood, but were driven off. Farmers say there are twenty-five or thirty of the dogs.

NO COAL SHORTAGE FELT IN KINGSTON

Prices for Chestnut Go to $12 a Ton in New York City—One Local Dealer Not Pessimistic at Prospects.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 31.—The greatest coal shortage in this city since 1906 was predicted today by dealers. Anthracite sold at from $10 to $12 a ton. The two chief causes are the increased amounts of fuel used by manufacturing plants and the desertion of thousands of miners, who can secure higher wages in munitions factories.

According to the coal barons the people can "thank God for W. W." (warm weather) otherwise anthracite prices would be soaring in Kingston at the present writing the same as they are now doing in New York. Prices for chestnut coal reached $12 a ton in Manhattan Monday and $10 in Brooklyn. Shortage of labor and shortage of cars are given as the causes.

One of the local companies said today that there was likely to be an advance in prevailing prices in this city. Another dealer expressed a contrary opinion. He said that while there might be an increase during the winter if the wholesalers demanded more from the retailers, he did not believe there would be any tilt in prices at the present time. With the close of navigation on the lakes and the stopping of coal shipments to those points, this dealer believes that the shortage elsewhere would be relieved.

October has been a much warmer month this year than last and the amount of coal laid in by consumers has not been so large nor has much of it been burned.

Soft coal is $3 a ton higher than it was last year and is selling at local yards at from $6.50 to $7 a ton.

Battle with Hold-up Men.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Richard Hatfield is dead and two men seriously wounded as a result of battles with hold-up men early today. The bandits killed Hatfield and wounded one man in a saloon hold-up. While their victims were still lying on the floor, they held up another saloon, wounded the second man, and escaped in the darkness. The loot obtained by the robbers was less than $50.

NEEDLESS OFFICE TO BE ABOLISHED

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Albany, Oct. 31.—If the recommendation of Charles H. Strong, named by Governor Whitman to investigate the system of charities at present working in the state, are carried out, the office of fiscal supervisor of state charities will be abolished by the legislature of 1917.

It will be remembered that a thorough investigation into charitable methods in which the state of New York was in any way connected was ordered by Governor Whitman under the Moreland act. The investigation was deemed imperative because of the criticism and allegations which had been made. Mr. Strong has submitted his report to the executive and among the improvements he believes necessary is the abolition of the functions of the fiscal supervisor.

The Military Academy is better equipped than the navy, and the scope of the scenes depicted is indicated by the numerous activities portrayed, such as rifle practice, mortar drill, battalion inspection, pitching and striking shelter tents, drills in extended order, gymnastic exercises, field artillery practice, manipulating disappearing guns, etc. Pictures also are shown of Hawaii, Norway and Spain, the views showing not only the life of the people but the natural history of the places visited.

HUDSON VALLEY'S INTERESTS SERVED

Barge Canal Terminal Plans of State Engineer Frank M. Williams Are Based on Economical Expenditure of Present Appropriations—Will Benefit Kingston.

The point for the proposed canal terminal at this port which has been surveyed by engineers from the department of the canal and surveyor, is situated directly on the Hudson river and will give a deep channel to the proposed terminal.

FRANK M. WILLIAMS.

The proposed terminal at Kingston was the outgrowth of the recommendations made to the legislature, last year, by State Engineer Williams. In making these suggestions Mr. Williams pointed out that under the present terminal law of the state, no provision has been made for the construction of terminals on the Hudson river between New York city and Albany. Mr. Williams in making these recommendations further explained that under the law, as approved in 1911, certain specific sums had been appropriated for use in building terminals at points throughout the state which had been designated. Section 5 of this law, however, makes provision for the building of terminals at points not specifically mentioned and sets aside $1,000,000 for this purpose. All of this $1,000,000 has been expended, or is obligated for the construction of terminals now built or building under this section and for their equipment. In order to build terminals on the Hudson river Mr. Williams recommended that proper legislative action be taken so that the unexpended balances for terminals where specific sums have been appropriated can be utilized for the building of terminals on the Hudson. In this manner these structures can be built without the necessity of a direct legislative appropriation and without the application of a further tax.

In selecting Kingston as a point where such a terminal might be constructed, Mr. Williams took into consideration its value as a shipping and manufacturing center. The Ulster and Delaware and West Shore railroads make Kingston very available for a barge canal terminal, as by utilizing the Ulster and Delaware, a large amount of freight coming from the Catskill mountains and points remote from the canal, can be brought to Kingston, transferred to barges here and taken to points up state, or on the Great Lakes, cheaper than it can be shipped direct to these places by rail. This would, of course, serve to benefit the people living in the counties of Ulster, Delaware, Orange and Sullivan.

Mr. Williams is a staunch advocate of the barge canal terminals and, in fact, has said that he believes these structures will do much toward establishing the prosperity that was once enjoyed by the old Erie and other canals in New York. During his first term as state engineer, which was in 1909 and 1910, Mr. Williams served as chairman of the barge canal terminal commission, which after making a careful study of terminal and harbor facilities throughout the state submitted a report which served, in most all its essential features, as the basis for the present barge canal terminal law.

The state engineer's commission has the unexpended balances for terminals where specific sums have been appropriated, be utilized in building terminals on the Hudson river, is in keeping with his policy of economy and this has been further illustrated by his advocacy of a change in the laws of the state which will enable it to utilize the vast amount of waterpower that has been created by the construction of the barge canal and which is now going to waste simply because the law forbids its utilization. In advocating this, Mr. Williams points out that, by making it possible for the state to lease this waterpower, and by applying any monies derived from such leasing of power toward the liquidation of the bonds which have made the $150,000,000 barge canal possible much money could be saved the taxpayer.

Mr. Williams has proven his ability as an engineer during the time he has held the office of state engineer. He is anxious to serve all of the people of the state, all of the time, and if it is desired to see Kingston have a barge canal terminal, it will be a very good thing to re-elect Mr. Williams for another term of two years, rather than to entrust this work to other hands and run the chance of having the work that has been done undone.

MENKE'S DAILY
SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Oct. 31.—The pigskin meadows gradually are becoming peopled with youths who are doing stunts that merit their consideration for jobs on the mythical All-American eleven.

The achievements of Harry LeGore of Yale so far have given him ranking among the greatest half-backing persons on the profess. There isn't anything that LeGore cannot do—and do exceptionally well. Andy Hastings, star Pittsburgh backfield, has shone with special brilliancy so far. He was ranked by some as an All-American man in 1915. This season he has played far beyond anything ever shown before. Unless he slips back during the games to come—a possibility remote in an extreme—Hastings will take unto himself a first class job on the All-Star team.

Casey, the Harvard backfield "end," is ranked as "a second Mahan." But how will Casey show when he is put to the Yale and Princeton tests. Horween, another Crusader, is being touted strongly up in Cambridge for his fine work. Then there is Berry, the great Pennsylvania halfback, who, almost unaided beat the powerful Penn State crew.

McFadden of Washington & Jefferson, never a flashy player, has been exhibiting in a way this year that stamps him as one of the really great. McLaren, of Pittsburgh, is another star; a plunging halfback that reawakens memories of "Wee Willie" Weston. Oliphant, picked by many last season, is performing in the same dazzling manner for the army this season. Tibbitt, of Princeton, also has earned plenty of applause.

Sprafka, of Minnesota, stands out just now as one of the best half-backs in the west. He has been responsible in the main for the great scoring done so far by his team. Driscoll, of Northwestern is another whose work has been brilliant. Harley, of Ohio State, has starred in every game—and in every department of the game.

Among the other halfbacks and fullbacks whose great work merits them much thought are: Mueller, (Cornell); Maubetsch, (Michigan); Macombe, (Illinois); Watkins, (Colgate); Pollard, (Brown); DeHart, (Pittsburgh); Princes, (Princeton); Bingham, (Yale); Hubbard, (Colgate); Gerish, (Yale); Thielcher, (Dartmouth); Ingram, (Navy); Noss, (W. & J.); and Carlson, (Minn.).

Turning to quarterbacks, one is confronted instantly with Long of Minnesota. If any "pivot man" has performed in a more remarkable way than Long, his name is unknown just now. He is a wizard—brainy, fast, courageous, a grand kicker, and an uncanny runner. Next to Peter Russell, he probably was the greatest!

Long is one and Long is the best in the west—if not in the country. Star quarterbacks are rather scarce in the east. Shivelick, of Cornell, looks like one of the quarterbacks in the east, with Anderson, of Colgate, close up. Purdy (Brown); Meehan, (Syracuse); Morrow (Pittsburgh); Robinson and Murray (Harvard); Bddy (Princeton) and Stobbs (W. & J.). All are good men, but none has flashed his full power so far.

Bob Peck, captain of Pittsburgh, was the All-American center selection by Walter Camp and about 90 per cent of the other critics last year. The Panther leader's work to date makes it look like re-election for him. Hansen, of Minnesota, sizes up as the best man so far uncovered in the west.

White and Schlachter, the 256 and 248 pound Syracuse guards looked like a perfect pair, until that Pitt game. But the way they were forced to give ground before the crashing attack of the Panther backs has lowered their stock. Daddum (Harvard); Petty (Illinois); Hancock (Wisconsin); Nourse (Princeton); Galt (Yale); Neely (Dartmouth); Anderson (Cornell); Winberly (W. & J.); Barton (Colgate); Sutherland (Pittsburgh); Horz (Princeton) and Black of Yale all have played far beyond the average. Each must be considered when the "picking" day arrives.

An 18 year old youth named Henry is one of the leaders in the fight for tackle chores. He is the 225 pound W. & J. linesman. Henry has been smashing lines to ribbons this year and despite his bulk has been under most of the punts. He is fast, powerful and fearless.

Among the other tackles who are notched high are Wheeler of Harvard; Thornhill of Pittsburgh; Ward and Farnum of Brown; Horning of Colgate; Cotton of Dartmouth; Jewett of Cornell; Ward of Navy; Jackson of Chicago; Weimann of Michigan; Bennett of Northwestern; Koch of Wisconsin; Mathews of Pennsy; McLean of Princeton, and Seidel of Pittsburgh.

The battle for end positions is a merry one. It involves Higgins of Penn State of All-American calibre a year ago; Baston of Minnesota; Brodes, Chicago; both Yale wing ends; Harle of (Harvard); Carlson of Pittsburgh; Hiebley of Princeton; Merers, (Wisconsin); C. Coelidge (Harvard); Nielsen, (Colgate); Whitthill, (W. & J.); Dunne, (Michigan).

So, you see, this business of picking eleven men from that crop and the others that will grow up during November is going to be quite a job. Oscar.

PLUTARCH.

Pistarch, Oct. 31.—Rev. Jesse Coddington of Highland is expected to preach here on Sunday, November 5. Come out and hear him. He is a good preacher and you will be well pleased.

Edward Parson Weston, the great pedestrian, walked to Highland on Monday, a distance of ten miles. He called on some friends while there and brought his niece back with him, but they did not walk. They came by trolley. Fred Palmatier has secured a position in Poughkeepsie and with his wife moved there on Saturday.
